One method is as follows: To find the day of the week for any date in the Julian or Gregorian calendars to 2299: (1) Take the last two figures of the year date and add to them one quarter of the number formed by them, ignoring the remainder. (2) For the century: Gregorian calendar, if the first two figures are 17 (since 1752), add 4; 2 for 18; 0 for 19; 6 for 20; 4 for 21; 2 for 22; Julian, if the first two figures are divisible by 7, add 0; if not, add the difference between the figures and the next multiple of 7 above it. (3) For the months, add as follows: Gregorian, 0 for Apr. or July; 1 for Jan. or Oct.; 2 for May; 3 for Aug.; 4 for Feb., Mar., or Nov.; 5 for June; 6 for Sept. or Dec.; if a leap year, add 0 for Jan. and 3 for Feb.; Julian, 0 for Aug.; 1 for Feb., Mar., or Nov.; 2 for June; 3 for Sept. or Dec.; 4 for Apr. or July; 5 for Jan. or Oct.; 6 for May; if a leap year, add 4 for Jan. and 0 for Feb. (4) Add the day of the month. (5) Divide the sum of (1) to (4) by 7 and the remainder will be the day of the week, Sunday being the first day. If there is no remainder, the day will be Saturday. Examples: 1. What day of the week was Feb. 28, 1930? (1) $30 + 7$; + (2) 0; + (3) 4; + (4) 28 = 69. $69 \div 7 = 9 + 6$.

The sixth day of the week is Friday. 2. What day was Jan. 16, 1600? (1) 00 + 0; + (2) 5; + (3) 4 (leap year); + (4) 16 = 25. 25 ÷ 7 = 3 + 4. The fourth day is Wednesday.

quotation mark. One of the marks used in printing and writing to indicate the beginning and the end of matter quoted verbatim. In printing, quotation marks are two inverted commas ["] at the beginning and two apostrophes ["] at the end. A quotation within a quotation is generally set off by single marks; as, "The youth replies, 'I will!'" Commonly, however, in British practice and with increasing frequency in American practice single marks are used to set off the initial quotation and double marks a quotation within a quotation. At the end of a quotation the comma or period is regularly included within the quotation marks; the colon, semicolon, question mark, exclamation point, or dash is placed inside or outside according as it belongs to the quoted matter or to the whole sentence. In practice the colon and semicolon are regularly placed outside because quoted matter terminating at a colon or semicolon regularly drops the colon or semicolon in favor of the punctuation of the main clause. Thus: Do not say "I'm sorry"; say nothing. But, "The Lord is my shepherd" — he began — "I shall not want." See Punctuation § 10.
